Bangkok Climate and Weather

Bangkok has a tropical monsoon climate and the highest average temperature of any city in the world. Temperatures in Bangkok regularly stay well above 30°C throughout the year. The period between November and February is the driest period in Bangkok. The humidity levels also remain high during this period. The climate in Bangkok is at its hottest from March to August, while the rainy season tends to fall between June and October. At this time of the year you can expect short spells of rainy weather, with frequent afternoon showers, monsoons and spells of thunder at times.

Cool season : Although the temperatures scarcely vary greatly from month to month, the experienced tourists believe October through until February is probably the best time to travel Bangkok. During this time, temperatures are not as high as other times of the year and normally stand between 25 and 28 degrees Celsius. There occur occasional shower and gentle wind that provide a break from the heat.
