Burdwan Medical College & Hospital (India), Kyushu University Hospital (Japan)	The current healthcare environment requires competent physicians to coordinate with an interprofessional team to deliver safe, high quality, and cost-effective patient care. Medical education needs to inculcate personal ethical standards of thought and behavior as well as critical thinking among students and develop self-directed learning skills. The aims of medical education are many and the education process should be life-long. In this session, we presented 6 studies on medical education conducted in our institution.
