【 Comments 】

Five Kenyan endoscopists who had 1-month training at Kyushu University Hospital as part of the “Projects for Global Growth of Medical Technologies” reported their fruitful experiences to Kenyatta Hospital, where they belong. A case report on MALT lymphoma, which looks like early gastric cancer, was presented from Japan, and a lecture on endoscopic diagnosis of colorectal tumors was given from Kenya, leading to a lively discussion. We hope that next year's program will be more productive.
